Chatham County-Savannah Metropolitan Planning Commission (MPC) Historic Preservation Department

Organizational History:

The Chatham County-Savannah Metropolitan Planning Commission (MPC) began in 1955 as the Savannah Metropolitan Planning Commission. Two years later, Chatham County was added when the State General Assembly enacted legislation permitting joint city-county planning commissions. The City of Savannah and unincorporated Chatham County charged the Planning Commission with the development of a comprehensive plan for the entire metropolitan area, advance and short range planning for individual political subdivisions, and the development and administration of subdivision and zoning planning tools. Now, MPC is also responsible for land use, transportation, environmental and growth management planning, as well as the Savannah Area Geographic Information System (SAGIS). MPC is funded mainly by the City and County governments. The agency is governed by a Board of Commissioners whose members are appointed by the elected officials of two governmental entities, the City of Savannah and Chatham County. The Board membership includes the chief executives of both governments. The remainder of the Board consists of a diverse group of appointed citizens representing various walks of life in Savannah and Chatham County. The Historic Preservation Department protects and preserves the City of Savannah and Chatham County's historic resources through local zoning ordinances.
